Excerpt: .would be toleration; and to obtain toleration, (if so they might,) we think it would not be unlawful to submit to the appointment of the state in some things, in their own nature indifferent, and which had not been settled by divine authority: for example, that their meetings should be held in a publick edifice appropriated to the purpose, and at a certain hour of the day, that the government might be secure in nothing hostile being transacted. But as to the supposition of obtaining the sanction of heathen authority to the rule of practice given by Jehovah in the New Testament, it is in itself so contradictory as not to admit of reasoning upon it; for it is supposing the state to authorize what directly tended to subvert its own religious constitution--it is supposing it to sanction the desertion of its temples,...

Reviews

Without doubt, this is actually the greatest work by any writer. It is actually written in simple terms instead of confusing. I found out this ebook from my i and dad recommended this pdf to understand.
