Excerpt: .them to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven; -- when St. Paul says expressly, that the children of believers are holy; --can any one presume to say, that a child so dying after having been baptized, and admitted into the body of Christ s Church, will not be received into heaven, and that Christ himself and St. Paul have said what we are Not to believe? If a child, then, so dying, be received into the kingdom of heaven, the Church, in that case, I think, without dispute, must be justified in calling that child regenerated. But as it is impossible the Church should know whether the child would die or not before actual sin, she applies the word regenerated to it, as it is charitably presumed to be after baptism, when she publicly receives it into the communion of Christ...
