ON this day was discussed the grand question of the Veto; and we must say, that it had never been known that the assembly contained so many men of talents, as appeared in the tribune on this important occasion. Already had Messieurs de Ltancourt Salky Rabaut de Saint-Etienne, Malouet, and Pethion de Vlleneuve, delivered their, opinions. M. DE MIRABEAU. Gentlemen , IN the best organized monarchies, the royal authority is always an object of fear When I delivered my sentiments upon the royal sanction, I partly spoke, and partly read: if every thing I said is not to be found here, at least nothing will fear to the best citizens: he whom the law places over all, easily becomes the rival of the will be found here which I have not said. The indulgence os an assembly is much greater than that of readers; I am therefore really making a sacrifice of my self-love in obedience to the assembly, by suffering this speech to be printed. It is become impossible, from the course followed by the National Assembly, to write any thing carefully, or even to organize any work. It is equally impossible to meditate matter, unless one hath a great deal of time beforehand. Whoever goes to the National Assembly without principles ready fixed, will run the risk of embracing no opinions there but such as are exceedingly unwise. There hath appeared, however, upon the noble subject of the royal...
